CONVENTION HAS NO POWER TO PROVIDE FOR PRIMARIES

Guthrie, Okla. Feb. 13.—Authority does not rest with the constitutional convention to provide for mandatory primary election, according to an opinion rendered yesterday by the judiciary committee. Several days ago the election committee addressed questions to judiciary members, indicating its desire in reporting an election system for the constitution to include mandatory primaries for the first election. The committee has replied that the Oklahoma territory laws governing primary as well as general election are extended to and put in force in the Indian territory by the enabling act. The committee also agrees that the primary laws thus extended provide for an optional primary election to be determined by the political parties, and that the convention is without authority to provide otherwise. The matter is thus transferred to the party's central committee to order primaries through convention if they desire.

The judiciary committee gives its further opinion that the convention has no power to prescribe the qualifications of the electors to vote for or against the constitution, as such is fixed by the enabling act, but may prescribe qualifications of electors who shall vote for state, district or county officers at the time of the election for the purpose of ratifying the constitution.

The convention has power to create election boards to conduct the election both for the purpose of ratifying the constitution and electing officers; it has power to create a board for canvassing the vote for state, county and district elections, but not to canvass returns of the ratification or rejection of the constitution, as such canvassing boards are provided for by the enabling act.

The convention yesterday adopted the report of the committee on county and township organizations by providing that the county officers shall be judge, attorney, clerk, clerks of the district courts, sheriff, treasurer, register of deeds, surveyor, superintendent of public instruction and three commissioners, all subject to change by the Legislature. Efforts to provide for coroners and to combine the county and district clerks were voted down.

Early in the day short memorial services were held by the convention for Abraham Lincoln. Eulogies were delivered by delegates Murray, Williams of Durant, Caudill, Mitch, Asp, Herring, Pittman, Cobb and Williams of Stockholm. At noon the adjournment was in memory of the illustrious dead.

RESIDENCE OF G. B. DISMUKES

FIRST ELECTION WILL LIKELY OCCUR AUGUST 6

Guthrie, Okla. Feb. 13.—Immediately upon the adjournment of the constitutional convention, the president thereof shall issue a proclamation naming Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1907, as the date of the election of all state, district, county and township officers of the new state and the ratification or rejection of the constitution, under the report of the committee on privileges and elections which is now practically completed. Chairman Cham Jones said last night that he hoped to be able to submit the report to the convention today.

The report provides for the creation of a "Supreme election board of the state of Oklahoma" consisting of five members, not more than three of whom shall be of the same political party. The manner of choosing the members of this board has not been definitely decided, but is probable that their election will be left to the convention, to be decided when the report is being considered. Any vacancy occurring in the board after its creation shall be filled by the remaining members or member of the same political faith as the one whose incumbency has for any cause ceased. Within ten days after the adoption of the ordinance by the constitutional convention, creating the supreme election board, it shall meet and organize by election of its members chairman.

It is made the duty of the state board to create a board of election commissioners of three members for each county in the whole state. Not more than two members of the county board shall be members of the same political party.

Within 20 days after their appointment each county board shall divide its county into election precincts and designate the polling places therein. A map of each county showing the precincts and polling places must be filed with the supreme election board by the county boards.

These county boards are given the same duties and powers as the election commissioners under the laws of the territory of Oklahoma.

They shall make returns to the supreme election board of the state on all elections except for the ratification or rejection of all the constitution and all separate ordinances submitted with the same, which shall be returned to the secretary of the territory of Oklahoma as prescribed in the enabling act. The question of the ratification or rejection of the constitution must be submitted on a ballot separate from all other questions voted on.

The supreme election board, having canvassed the result of the election of United States senators, will certify this result to each branch of the state legislature on the first day of its session.

GREER COUNTY SUES TO PREVENT DIVISION

Guthrie, Ok., Feb. 13.—The County Commissioners of Greer County, division of which into three parts is contemplated by the Constitutional convention, yesterday applied to the Oklahoma Supreme Court for an order restraining the convention from placing such division in effect. The plaintiffs are represented by Charles M. Thacker, County Attorney of Greer County, and Charles H. Eagin, both of Mangum.

The brief filed in the suit recites that the Supreme and District Courts are jurisdiction under the enabling act for redress of wrongs committed against the Constitution or laws of the United States or of the Territories affecting persons or property. The right of the convention to cut new counties out of those created by the Congressional act is denied, for the reason that in the transition from Territorial conditions to statehood the necessity for such action does not exist.

It is declared that Greer County was established by Congress, which is a higher authority than the body proposing the alteration, and recognizing the changing of county lines as purely of legislative authority, no alteration was legal except by the Legislature after statehood. An additional reason is laid in the fact that Greer County is named as a county in the Fifth Congressional District by the organic act, which designation forbids any other until the next general census. The convention's proposed action deprives the Legislature or people of any voice in the convention's edict or the loss of statehood; that the enabling act gave the convention only legislative power as to creating one county out of the Osage Nation; that the method proposed for submitting the division question to the people is an attempt to bring duress upon the people through fear of defeating the Constitution itself.

The section of the enabling act upon which plaintiffs rest their case in establishing the convention's authority reads:

"After organization shall declare on behalf of the people of the said proposed State that they adopt the Constitution of the United States; whereupon the said convention shall and is hereby authorized to form a Constitution and State government for the proposed said State."

The provision proposing a division of Greer County has not passed third reading.

FRIGHTFUL LOSS OF LIFE FROM COLLISION AT SEA

Block Island, R. I., Feb. 13.—A marine disaster with an appalling loss of life and entailing suffering almost beyond the limit of human endurance came to light yesterday when a lifeboat of the Joy Line Steamer Larchmont, bound from Providence to New York, drifted into Block Island. The Larchmont had been in collision with the three-masted schooner Harry Knowlton and sank within half an hour after the accident.

In the boat were several bodies of men who had died from the effects of long hours of exposure to a death-dealing temperature. In the boat also were eleven men whose sufferings were so intense that they seemed oblivious to the fact that relief was in their midst and that they had escaped only by virtue of their ability to withstand the rigor of zero weather in an open boat at sea.

The boat brought a tale of disaster that has rarely been equaled in New England waters and it is believed that when the final count is made it will be found that not less than 150 lives were lost.

Following closely in the wake of the solitary lifeboat came bodies, lifeboats and rafts cast upon the beach by angry waves.

Owing to the condition of the survivors it was impossible to get from them an estimate of the loss of life. From 75 to 150 went to their death, and at a late hour tonight it was believed that the latter figures are nearest correct.

Neglected Colds Threatened Life.
[From the Chicago Tribune.]

"Don't trifle with a cold," is good advice for prudent men and women. It may be vital in the case of a child. Proper food, good ventilation, and dry, warm clothing are the proper safeguards against colds. If they are maintained through the changeable weather of autumn, winter and spring, the chances of a surprise from ordinary colds will be slight. But the ordinary light cold will become severe if neglected, and a well established ripe cold is to the germs of diphtheria what honey is to the bee. The greatest menace to child life at this season of the year is the neglected cold. Whether it is a child or adult, the cold slight or severe, the very best treatment that can be adopted is to give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is safe and sure. The great popularity and immense sale of this preparation has been attained by its remarkable cures of this ailment. A cold never results in pneumonia when it is given. For sale by G. M. Ramsey.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

Dental Job Goes Begging.
Municipal authorities of Barmen, Prussia, have been requested to advertise for a dentist who is willing to attend an elephant, an inmate of the local zoo. He suffers from peevishness in consequence of frequent attacks of toothache, caused by overabundance of sweets. At such times he is practically unmanageable. The local dentists refuse to attempt to fill his teeth. One dentist was brave enough to try to examine an aching tooth, but the enraged elephant chased him around the inclosure and the dentist afterward sent in a bill for damages caused by the shock.

Difference in the Races.
The Frenchman of the middle class sacrifices everything in order to obtain for his children some official position or other, a mean one, perhaps, but a sure one, leading after 30 years of penury to a pension verging on destitution. This is one aspect of the decay of the French race. It is easy to understand that two races are not evenly armed for the struggle for life if one be made up of aspirants to official positions and the other of individuals possessing initiative, daring and energy. For this reason do Latin races decline, while Anglo-Saxon races grow and multiply.—Paris Sicle.

Firers of Fatal Shot Unknown.
"You know how a soldier traitor is put to death," said the colonel. "The traitor stands blindfolded and half a dozen privates shoot at him simultaneously. But perhaps you don't know that each of those privates, though he take the most careful aim, may afterward say without fear of contradiction that the traitor's blood does not stain his hands.
"This is the reason: Two of the rifles for this ghastly shooting are always loaded with blank cartridges. Then they are shuffled and no one knows which the harmless ones are. The executioners draw and each is as like as not to draw a harmless gun. So, when they shoot they can solace themselves for their un-Christianlike work with the thought that maybe they are only shooting a blank cartridge at the poor, blindfolded wretch before them."

INDIAN SCULPTURE IS LOST.

Action of Water Destroys Relic Prized by Antiquarians.

One of three known examples in the United States, the famous Indian "sculpture" on two of the immense rocks which form the "great falls" of the Connecticut river at Bellows Falls, has been entirely obliterated, not a trace of the marking which recorded some important event in the history of the aborigines being left.

The sculpture was a favorite subject of discussion for antiquarians, and developed much controversy as to the manner and time in which it was made. When first discovered it consisted of a group of sixteen or eighteen variously ornamented heads plainly cut into the rocks. The main piece of work was shown on a flat space about fifteen feet wide and six feet high, and consisted of four heads each surmounted with a pair of rays and numerous heads without any decoration. On the other rock was one large head with at least eight rays, this head being fourteen inches in depth and ten inches across at the forehead. There may have been originally also an inscription, but if so it had become obliterated by the action of the water years ago.

The markings are supposed to have represented a victory at or near Bellows Falls by four bands and their chiefs under one principal chief. The fact that the action of the water has removed what was discovered on the rocks a hundred years or so ago indicates to not a few that much more of the record must have disappeared previously.

EGGS COOKED WITHOUT FIRE.

Eastern Dish Served to Guests of New York Restaurant.

There is a Turkish restaurant in New York where one may eat pilafs, sherbets and saffron-colored goat stew, but the oddest dish the menu boasts is "whirled eggs."

Whirled eggs, an impressive dish, is prepared before the guest. When it is ordered a cook enters the dining room with a kind of sling in his hand—a little pot attached to the end of a leather cord.

The man opens the eggs, seasons them and shuts them up in the little pot. Then he whirles the pot at the end of its cord around his head at inconceivable speed. Round and round it runs. Its outlines become vague. It seems to smoke a little.

Suddenly the man opens it and sets the eggs before the guest. They are beautifully scrambled and quite hot. The heat of their motion through the air is what has cooked them.

"Thus," explains the Turkish host, "the Eastern shepherds cook their eggs, whirling them in a sling like that wherewith David overcame the giant Goliath."

The Vegetarian Bed.

"What a delightful bed you gave me," said the guest. "I never slept so well in all my life. Why, it was like camping in the woods."

The vegetarian host smiled. "And did you notice the smell of the bed?" he asked.

"I should think so," said the other. "An odor like pine forests, fields of lavender, flowers and ferns."

"It was a vegetarian bed you slept on," said the host. "Not a bed of vile horse hair, torn from the worn-out carcass of a poor dead nag, but a bed of dried mosses and ferns and hay and pungent, aromatic herbs."

"We vegetarians invented this bed a year ago, and all who try it love it. It is quite as comfortable, quite as springy and elastic, as a horse hair bed and it is much more pleasant and healthful. Its sweet, woodland odor induces sleep like morphine."

Records for Reading.

"Our reading record," said the aged librarian, "is held by a rich old lady of 73 years. She has read, our books show, over 15,000 volumes—300 volumes a year since 1854.

"Our average subscriber reads in the year's course from 75 to 100 volumes, though we have many clients who get through 200 volumes every 12 months. Those who buy their books read much less. I am informed by a bookseller that the average book buyer doesn't read more than 25 or 30 books a year. The book buyer who reads 100 books a year is a very rare bird."

A Telephonic Surprise.

"There was a patient in my office the other day when the telephone rang," remarked the doctor, "and I conversed with the party on the other end of the wire in German. When I replaced the receiver and turned to the patient he looked at me in surprise and said:

"Ain't that wonderful! I didn't know it was possible to speak in German over the telephone."

The End of It.

"Now," said Markley, "here's a $5 bill. I can lend you that—"

"O! say," exclaimed Nervey, "can't you double it?"

"Of course. See? I double it once and then once again. In that shape it goes back into my pocketbook. Good day!"

Tough Luck.

"Did you call at Roxley's house?" asked the young doctor's wife.

"Yes," replied the doctor, "and I wish he had sent for me sooner."

"Gracious, is he so seriously ill?"

"No; just the contrary. I'm afraid he'll be all right again before I get in half a dozen visits."

ADA, CHICKASAW NATION, INDIAN TERRITORY.

The biggest little city in the new commonwealth. The city that has never experienced either a boom or a blow. During its six years' life it has gradually grown into a commercial and railroad center of 4,600 population. The growth has been natural, solid, and enduring.

Society excellent, good schools and strong churches; unsurpassed agricultural section; six railroad outlets; five more such outlets under contract to build by September, 1907, bonuses are raised.

A big Portland cement plant with a pay roll of $3,500 per week, in process of construction; $40,000 worth of waterworks improvement, including a mammoth reservoir to furnish abundant water for factories.

Veritably Ada is a city built upon a rock, and it will stand. It is in the logical belt of various mineral resources. Court town for 16th Recording District and unquestionably a county seat under statehood. Not a rival town within a radius of 40 miles. In a cotton country, but not DEPENDANT UPON cotton. Healthful climate; good water. Low taxes; real estate values reasonable, but rising. Ada is the place pre-eminent to live or invest in. Better get in on the ground floor before the skyscrapers come.

The News Nuisance.

That mahogany brindle pup, when he was younger and daintier, bore the honor of being The News' mascot.

Now that he has grown bigger and smarter he has become The News Nuisance.

To illustrate how obnoxious he is since getting large enough to run around, he followed some school children this morning, and one may judge of the furor he created at the school building by the following note attached to the pup when returned to the News office before noon in custody of a 2nd grade boy who brought the pup and the note at the urgent request of the young lady school teacher:

"This is a very bright pupil. In an hour he has graduated from the Ada public school, having gone through the high first, the second and fourth in a very few minutes. He is too bright to stay any longer."

Crazy Negro in Jail.

Tom Bruner, a floating insane negro, was taken up by the U. S. officers Tuesday and placed in jail for safe keeping.

Since the legal procedure for the restraint of lunatics in the Territory is devious and cumbersome, the usual justifiable subterfuge was resorted to, viz. that of filing a straw complaint for assault to kill.

JUDGE FURMAN PRAISED

The Stratford Chronicle Has The Following to say About Judge Furman

In an address to the voters of Oklahoma Judge Furman has the following to say:

"The government has no right to tax one section or one class to build up and enrich other sections or other classes. If there ever was a time when our infant industries needed protection that time has long since ceased to exist. If they can compete with foreign manufacturers on foreign soil they certainly should do so on American soil.

"That they do so compete is conclusively shown by hundreds of millions worth of manufactured goods which we ship abroad each year and which are sold in foreign countries in competition with foreign manufacturers. Americans should certainly have the right to purchase American made goods at home as cheaply as foreigners can and do purchase these same goods in foreign markets."

Judge Furman's utterances in the above are utterly unanswerable by the champions of republicanism or any other ism, and could the democrats of this county get their consent to fall back on these issues that have never failed to win a victory we would never have another tyrant as we now have to threaten the rights of any state. The great monopolies of this country were fostered by a Chinese wall in the way of protective tariff and all this howl about trust and monopoly would have gone out of existence only for this Chinese tariff wall. If the democratic party will elect more Furmans to fight their battles, men who are ready and willing to throw down socialistic ideas such as government ownership and fight for real issues upon which this great government has been built and maintained they will know no defeat.

Everybody Pleased

Ada people had seen numerous moving picture shows before and had been measurably pleased; but not until Tuesday night did they learn the difference between excellent and ordinary moving pictures. That night in large numbers Ada people were at the opera house and enjoyed Whitney's celebrated bioscope in operation.

Such an improvement it is over the ordinary picture machine that it proved a revelation and a continuous joy. The best feature of it, there were no flickers or quivers, such as usually tire one's eyes and keep one blinking.

Then the two hours' program was chosen with consummate taste, was altogether charming. There were the thrilling scenes of "The Fire Bug," "The Train Wreckers," "The Mutiny and rioting at Odessa, the fun of a fantastic auto ride, a trip to the moon, courtship under difficulties—and a score of other good things. Each group of pictures is followed by a three minutes intermission enlivened by phonograph selections.

The attraction affords a rare opportunity both to laugh and to learn.

Tonight the low prices will prevail and there will be a sweeping change of program.

Small Gas at Shawnee.

Shawnee, Ok., Feb. 12.—When a well drill at the farm of T. W. The noise still continues and can be heard for several hundred yards. The drills will be sent deeper as soon as strong equipment can be secured.

A WONDERFUL CITY of MARBLE

EAGLE LAKE

The entire Pacific Northwest is talking about the discovery in Stevens county, Washington, of the most wonderful marble deposits in the world, deposits which rival those of the famed Carrara mines of Italy and make the great marble beds of Vermont a mere side show.

In this most wonderful country of a wonderful inland empire are mountains of marble rising abruptly from the banks of the Columbia river to a height of from 200 to 800 feet and extending back from the river for more than one mile—solid mountains of marble containing all of the finest varieties manufactured in any country and sold at fancy prices. In connection with these almost unlimited and unestimated marble deposits there have been discovered several of the most beautiful lakes imaginable, marble lakes with banks and bottoms which rival the beauties of many famous collections of marble statuary in the museums and in the homes of millionaires.

These lakes are huge marble basins filled with crystalline water of a purity which gives back to the surface such a perfect picture of tinted beauty as can be seen in no other place. Around one of these exquisite marble lakes—Eagle lake it is called—not more than three miles from the town of Bossburg a large marble company has perfected plans for the construction of a marble town. It is planned to make the entire town and the future city of solid marble, polished and tinted in such a manner as to make a fairylike place read of in story books and seen in the dreams of childhood.

The beauties of the lake around which the marble town is to be built are indescribable. The shores are prettily wooded and the oval marble banks slope gently down to the surface of the water. Every portion of the bottom of this wonderful lake can be clearly seen through the opalescent waters and the tinting and coloring of the marble are easily distinguished. Around this lake and around this future city it is likely that the greatest marble industry in the world will, in time, center. The only marble deposits which compare with those in Stevens county in extent are those of the Caharra mountain in Italy, from which marble has been quarried for the past 2,500 years.

It was not until 1893 that the discovery was made. Prior to that time every one supposed that the great white mountain-like formations skirting the bank of the Columbia was limestone, so white had it weathered in the ages that had passed. Not until then did any one take the trouble to ascertain that the purest and best quality of marble had been thrown up there by the hand of nature in exactly the most natural spot to quarry. Not until a comparatively recent date was it determined that the marble deposits were of such inexhaustible character. Since then marble mills have been erected in Spokane and the development of the marble quarries has been rapid. Chicago capital and Chicago enterprise are largely responsible for this. F. H. Sammis of Chicago is now in charge of the Spokane mills, which are cutting and polishing ten car loads of marble daily for the market.

The serpentine marble from these quarters is the greenest ever discovered, is of ivory-like texture and sells for $15 per cubic foot. Many of the less fine grades sell from $6 to $12 per cubic foot. It costs but 50 cents per cubic foot to quarry the marble, and it can be delivered at New York at an expense of $1.40 and at Chicago for $1 per cubic foot. From this it can be seen that it pays to own a good marble quarry. The Stevens county marble is in position to compete successfully with the Italian and with the Vermont marble in every market. There are several good reasons for this. The main reasons are the superiority of quality and the cheapness of quarrying. Most marbles are quarried beneath the surface and hoisted out. The Washington marble are quarried and then skidded down the mountain side to the cars. Other marble industries lease land and build railroads in order to get rid of their waste material. The Stevens county marble man simply dumps his waste down the mountain side, upon which there is an abundant supply of lumber.

a supply sufficient for all building purposes and for all packing and crating for at least 20 years to come.

Within 20 miles of the marble beds the enormous energy which lies in the falls of the Kettle river is being harnessed with a view to furnishing cheap electric power for quarrying purposes. The marble deposits are along the right of way of the Spokane Falls & Northern road, which is now owned and operated by the Great Northern, and James J. Hill is offering special inducements in the way of freight rates to develop this wonderful country.

In the New York market Italian Pavanazza never sells for less than $12 per cubic foot. It is a badly shattered marble. The Stevens county marble duplicates all of the Italian markings, surpasses it in beauty, presents a perfect solidity, and can be quarried and sold in New York for $6 per cubic foot with a net profit of $3.70 per cubic foot.

The beds from which this matchless marble comes rise from the sandy flats of the river, appearing in some places in long, unbroken slopes upon which one may climb to a height of 500 to 700 feet above the river level, traveling on solid marble all the way. These slopes are in many places smooth and solid, the pattern of the marble showing unbroken at the surface. In other places the marble rises above the river level in great bluffs, one above another. In many places the marble is found in smooth floors at the summits and in broad slopes drooping to the river banks. At the surface it is remarkably solid, indicating that the beds lie undisturbed to a great depth, its broad, unbroken surface of white displaying bold marking of blue and jet black. Frequently the top of the mass can be found floors an acre in expanse which are as smooth, hard and even as a rolled and leveled asphalt pavements.

A great deal of the marble at the surface is cream tinted and is crossed with jet black veins, resembling in pattern the famous Pavanazza marble of Italy, but much more solid and is free from the pit holes which damage the Italian product. It takes an extremely high polish and retains it, and its texture is dense, uniform and very fine crystalline, showing in many places marked translucency. There is one tract alone of this marble destined to rival the Pavanazza which contains 1,310 acres and which is capable of producing the finest marble for centuries to come without exhausting the supply.

This is not the only factor which has given Stevens county the reputation in the Northwest of being one of the most wonderful counties in the United States. Stevens is the northeast corner county of Washington and contains 2,945 square miles of territory and about 18,000 people. The Spokane Falls & Northern road bisects it north and south and provides it with markets. It is semi-mountainous, and in its mountains are gold and silver for the treasure hunter, copper and lead for the industries, lime and cement, quarries of onyx and jasper, marble, granite and slate for the builder, clays for the potter and the brickmaker, and in the foothills is timber in abundance. In the Columbia, the Pen d'Oreille and other valleys which these rich mineral mountains inclose are thousands of acres of the most fertile land imaginable, land upon which all kinds of fruits and cereals are being raised in abundance, amid scenery which is beautiful beyond description.

In speaking of the mineral deposits a recent discovery of tungsten and molybdenite must not be forgotten. There are only seventy tons of tungsten produced in this country annually, and it sells for $3,000 a ton. It is also produced in Australia, 2,500 tons annually, and in Sweden and Germany, but all of this output is absorbed by the Krupp works, where it is used in hardening steel. Large veins of this metal have been discovered in Stevens county from which can be produced more than 2,000 tons annually. Molybdenite, which sells for $850 a ton, is produced from a mine in Maine at the rate of 50 or 60 tons a year, and Colorado produces about 150 tons. The vein discovered in Stevens county is six feet wide, 30 feet deep and more than a mile long.

JIM

By B. T. Kahmann

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

We all liked Jim, not a man in the whole camp who was not his friend. The first time Jim made his appearance was on a chill September morning. I was walking to the mine when I heard a cheery whistle and, turning, beheld a tall, stalwart young fellow, dark eyes, a smiling mouth, and at once I took a fancy to him.

I smiled involuntarily and held forth my hand. He grasped it eagerly and, shaking it, turned his head as if to hide his emotion. "You are the first man to treat me like this, and you ain't never going to regret it."

I raised my eyes, looking at the firm, square jaw, and into the honest face, and answered, "I know I shall not."

From that day Jim remained. He was always Jim; no one knew him by any other name, and he offered no explanations. No one asked who he was, where he came from, what he had done, or how long he intended to stay. They all met him quietly and gladly accepted his presence, and soon every man, woman and child was his own particular friend.

Jim was no model, not by any means. He loved to stand before the Golden Gate bar, most of his earnings going to that source, but he never indulged too freely, and he was never known to be seen under the influence of liquor. He was fond of playing cards being one of his favorite amusements. He was much delighted when he won, but he always played fairly and squarely, and was never accused of cheating.

The little children in particular loved Jim. He was wont to sit with a dozen or more perched about him, one on each knee, some leaning confidently against him; all eagerly listening to some tale which he could so skillfully invent. Many a trinket found its way into their homes, and it was always Jim's deed.

One bright and sunny morning a group of men were leaning and lounging in the Golden Gate bar. Jim and I were at a table playing cards.

"The devil! I've won again!" cried Jim, slapping his knee in delight.

"I bet that is the last game you ever win," I retorted jokingly.

Scarcely had I spoken when the door was flung open and a man, panting and breathless, threw himself into the room. "The dam in the mine has given way."

"Great God!" The cards slipped from my hands as I realized the terrible meaning of his words.

"The miners will be drowned like rats in a trap; there ain't no way to get out," the man continued.

I saw Jim turn pale as he put down the cards. He seemed to study for a moment, then rose saying, "Yes, there is a way, only one way; they can't get out of the east shaft, because that is blocked by the breaking of the dam, but the wall, by breaking that the pressure of the water will be released, the water will rush through the opening, and a few hours' work will set them free."

"Do you know what it means to break that wall? Death for the one who attempts it. The water will surge out with such a tremendous force, taking everything in its way, and the man—he would scarcely have time to realize his fate."

He did not flinch; he acted as if there were no need for excitement, as if it were an every-day affair. "You spoke truly when you said that was my last game of cards. It is, pal, for Jim will never hold another ace."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that that wall must be broken, and I am the man to break it, and I don't think it likely that I shall ever play after that."

"Jim, you are crazy!" The exclamation fell from 20 lips in a single chorus.

"Oh, no I ain't; but it's got to be done."

We sprang forward, grasping him by the arms, but he shook himself free.

"Let me go, boys, of what good am I anyway? I never did anything in my life. Why not let me do this? You can't go; you have all got wives and children. Think of them and of the men in the mine, struggling for life and freedom, with that awful death in store for them. If no one goes and helps, hundreds, your best friends and all, will drown in the mine, when they can be so easily saved. What is the cost of one life when it will save hundreds? Who will mourn and weep when they bring me back so cold and still? There won't be any tears, because there is no one who cares, and if those hundreds perish, how great will be the ruin and disaster. You must let me go. Look! see those mothers. Listen to the songs upon their lips and see their smiling faces. Will they ever smile or sing if their husbands do not return to-night? See the little children; who will care for them if the father comes no more? What will those women so utterly helpless and dependent, what will they do if some one is not willing to take the risk? And then look at me. Will they be sad when I am gone? No. Will they be deprived of any delight and joy when Jim is hidden? No. Oh! you may be sorry, but that will vanish and soon the sun will shine just as brightly, the birds sing just as sweetly for you as if there had been no Jim."

A lump which I could not swallow came into my throat, and the others hid their faces. He looked so young and boyish, so strong and full of life, that to think of him still in death chilled our very hearts and minds.

"I ain't so good that I like to think of dying, but it has got to be. One or a hundred. One would be much better. You have all been mighty good to me, and I want to thank you. Think kindly of me, boys, and—and don't forget too soon, as I'd like to be remembered."

He slowly shook hands with us, one by one. The lips of the boys were drawn and it seemed to me that I was committing a crime. Just as he held my hand a sunny-haired girl ran up to Jim. "We wants a tory," she lisped.

He stooped and tossed her into the air. "Jim won't tell stories any more Jim's going away."

"No, Jim shan't go," she sobbed, clasping him about the neck as if to prevent. "Where is Jim going?"

"Way off, where they don't worry and where they ain't down on a man because he ain't rich and great; where everything is so nice—and sweet, and where even Jim can learn to be good."

The child stared at him in amazement. "That must be heaven, Jim!"

"It is heaven, I hope, and some day you will meet me over there." He kissed her softly, placing her upon the ground, while she ran to tell the rest.

"Follow me, but don't try to help." He hastened to the door, sprang upon the back of his mare and turned. His face was lighted with a smile, but it was transixed with a new radiance. The face of the rough miner was made beautiful by the greatness and mightiness of his deed and sacrifice.

We followed, and as we waited we could hear the thud, thud, thud of his hammer and the grating of his chisel, and even the falling of stone. He began to whistle the same old tune he loved so well—an old church hymn. We stood with bowed heads and beating hearts waitin for the end.

Then came a horrible, intense, deathlike stillness, which was quickly answered by a terrific explosion and report, as if a hundred cannons had gone off. The sound was that of a rock-crusher, as the stone fell, and the pieces of coal and dirt went seething past. Then again the silence, the ebbing and swirling of black, dark waters as they poured forth, rushing out, pell mell.

We stood, hoping against hope, yet knowing all the time how utterly useless it was. Presently we caught sight of a hand and his body floated to us. The dark face was partly crushed and discolored with blood, but there was a smile upon his lips. He had saved the miners and Jim had passed to his reward in the Great Beyond.

ON A BUSINESS BASIS.

Buyers Conscience Would Not Allow Him to Take Present.

Martin Van Camp, a wholesale poultryer of Omaha, was talking the other day about buyers.

"My salesmen," he said, "would always prefer to deal directly with the heads of firms instead of with buyers. With the heads everything always, is open and aboveboard. But in the case of buyers, anything one does seems to smack of trickery and deceit."

"A certain New York buyer for a big firm ordered from a salesman of mine last week a large consignment of turkeys. The salesman, pleased with the order, took the buyer a box of 100 expensive cigars. It was an honorable enough performance, but the buyer, when the present was offered to him, got mad."

"Look out," he said, warningly. "None of that. You can't bribe me, you know."

"The salesman was vexed, but he put a good face on the matter."

"Bribe you?" he exclaimed. "Why, man, you must be crazy. Who wants to bribe you? This was a simple little present, the same as I've made frequently to your employer. But if you won't have it as a present, why, buy it from me. Give me a quarter for it."

The buyer's suspicions vanished. He searched his pockets.

"I haven't got a quarter," he said. "I've got nothing less than this half dollar."

"And I," said the salesman, hoping after all that he wouldn't have to take the buyer's money—"and I haven't got a cent of change."

"But the buyer nevertheless thrust the half dollar on him."

"Keep it all," he said, "and you can bring me another box on your next trip."

Driving a Bargain.

"Tommy," said his mother, "if I give you a piece of pie will you try to be a good boy?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied Tommy, "an' I'll try to be gooder if you'll give me two pieces."

A Rebuke.

At Khartoum in Winter

MODERN NILE BOATS

For those whose desires lie outside the beaten track of globe trotter and tourist, the upper reaches of the Nile offer great inducements. Leaving Cairo by train, one starts from what will one day be the northern terminus of the great "Cape to Cairo" railway, and travels steadily southwards over the desert for two days.

Then a change is made to a Nile steamer, which southward, ever southward, slowly forges its way against the current of that mighty river whose history goes back to such remote impenetrable ages of antiquity. In another two days Wady Halfa is reached, and thence a light military railway bears the weary and disheveled traveler at length to Khartoum. Over 20 years have passed since Gordon's magnificent defense of the city against the Mahdi's hordes and his tragic fate at the hands of the Derivishes, thrilled all England to its depths. For the following 14 years the town was practically an abandoned ruin, the khalfia holding his court at Omdurman, on the other side of the river. Then, with the reconquest of the Sudan by Lord Kitchener, in 1898, everything was changed, and Khartoum arose proudly from its ruins to be once more the capital of that vast desert empire whose resources are as yet hardly realized and are absolutely undeveloped.

The old palace, where the great general met his death, was merely a ruined shell, haunted, as the superstitious natives averred, by his uneasy spirit, so it was decided to erect a new palace wherein the sirdar and his retinue might be fittingly housed. On the site of the former building arose the Gordon college, a really fine educational institution. Since then have risen in rapid succession a military hospital, an English church and a hotel, with lines of barracks and officers' quarters, dominating the quaint huts and low narrow bazaars which constitute the native city.

In the summer months it is said of Khartoum by those who have the misfortune to remain there that, had Dante visited it he would have added another canto to his "Inferno," only the opinion is generally expressed in language more terse than polite. The thermometer stands at 122 degrees in the shade, and the pitiless sun blazes down on the hot glaring desert, varied by periodical sandstorms, when the wind whirls down on the unhappy place with terrific violence, burying everybody and everything under a layer of choking sand. In addition, all the myriad descendants of that swarm of flies who constituted the fourth plague of Egypt lead one to fervently sympathize with the unfortunate subjects of King Pharaoh.

But with the month of October a change comes o'er the scene. The mercury gradually falls until it reaches 85 degrees or so, a freshness creeps into the dry bracing atmosphere, the nights become cooler and more restful, and the season is at hand. Those lady members of the English colony who have betaken themselves to Cairo, Alexandria, or even England, return, like birds to their nests, for the feminine element during the hot weather consists solely of the missionaries and a couple of enforcedly stoical army medical sisters. The quaint curiosity shops in the bazaar furnish up their goods, the English church holds on Sunday a fair-sized and smartly-dressed congregation, the hotel shows signs of life, and finally, with a grand flourish of trumpets the Sirdar and Lady Wingate arrive, take up their abode in the palace, and another season has begun.

Both the Sirdar and his wife are immensely popular, and contribute not a little to the gaiety of the city by entertaining frequently and giving a succession of dinners, dances and garden parties throughout the season. Their entertainments, too, have anything but the stiff, formal air which usually characterizes official gatherings, and their dinner parties are especially popular. The guests arrive in the little donkey-carriages known as arabahs, which constitute the chief mode of locomotion in Khartoum, and sit down at rose-decked tables to be waited on by dark-skinned Arabs in their picturesque attire, the repast being followed by an informal dance or by parlor games, amongst which musical chairs, in which every body joins with zest, is the Sirdar's favorite.

Amongst the community at large picnics are perhaps the most usual form of amusement, and one in which a good deal of variety can be obtained. Water-picnics are the chief favorites, a start being made early in the morning on one of the Nile steam-launches, the destination being some village or ruined temple not too far distant. The scenery is in parts exceedingly picturesque, owing its beauty to the striking coloring patches of vividly green herbage, alternating with strips of golden yellow sand, and over all the glorious azure of the cloudless sky, whilst a string of camels or a family of crocodiles basking in the sun add a finishing touch to the picture. When passing by a village, the natives eagerly flock to the banks to see the English people, to whom they will freely offer handfuls of luscious dates or bowls of frothing goat's milk, the dark faces sometimes strikingly handsome, alive with animation and interest.

Moonlight picnics, too, are extremely popular, enhanced by the joys of scampering over the desert on the back of a sturdy donkey, the almost inevitable means of locomotion, walking being practically an impossibility. The motion is swift, not unpleasant, albeit somewhat jerky, the donkey being continually stimulated to fresh efforts by the shrill cries of the Sudanese boys who run alongside. The setting forth of a donkey cavalcade for a picnic is usually attended by a little excitement, accompanied by much gesticulation and vociferation on the part of the donkey boys. A runaway has to be captured and ignominiously brought back and some obstinate asinine spirits have to be coerced, but eventually all is ready, and the procession makes its way to some rendezvous where the servants, sent on ahead, have prepared a meal in readiness for their masters' arrival.

As regards home life in Khartoum, for those whose duties lie in the Sudan, there are, of course, manifold difficulties and discomforts to be surmounted; yet, for at least six months in the year life may be at least endurable, not to say pleasant. Houses are large and fairly well-built, with good-sized lofty rooms and sleeping out on the flat roofs is a habit frequently if not usually indulged in, in spite of such minor drawbacks as the possibility of the sudden descent of a swarm of locusts.

Servants are obtainable in the shape of Sudanese men, black as soles, who are usually attired in spotless white garments with colored sashes. They are absolutely honest and wonderfully economical, making excellent cooks, who will contrive to set forth quite an astonishing variety of dishes manufactured from the slightest materials. They are curiously child-like in intellect and exceedingly quarrelsome amongst themselves, getting carried away to such an extent by anger over some trifling detail that they will fling half a dozen of one's most cherished dinner-plates at one another. The crash brings the mistress upon the scene, and her anger effectually cools the cholera of the servants, which is succeeded by abject penitence and promises of good behavior in the future.

CONVENTION HAS NO POWER TO PROVIDE FOR PRIMARIES

Guthrie, Okla. Feb. 13.—Authority does not rest with the constitutional convention to provide for mandatory primary election according to an opinion rendered yesterday by the judiciary committee. Several days ago the election committee addressed questions to judiciary members indicating its desire in reporting an election system for the constitution to include mandatory primaries for the first election. The committee has replied that the Oklahoma territory laws governing primary as well as general election are extended to and put in force in the Indian territory by the enabling act. The committee also agrees that the primary laws thus extended provide for an optional primary election to be determined by the political parties, and that the convention is without authority to provide otherwise. The matter is thus transferred to the party's central committee to order primaries through convention if they desire. The judiciary committee gives its further opinion that the convention has no power to prescribe the qualifications of the electors to vote for or against the constitution, as such is fixed by the enabling act, but may prescribe qualifications of electors who shall vote for state, district or county officers at the time of the election for the purpose of ratifying the constitution. The convention has power to create election boards to conduct the election both for the purpose of ratifying the constitution and electing officers, it has power to create a board for canvassing the vote for state county and district elections but not to canvass returns of the ratification or rejection of the constitution, as such canvassing boards are provided for by the enabling act. The convention yesterday adopted the report of the committee on county and township organizations by providing that the county officers shall be judge, attorney, clerk, clerks of the district courts, sheriff, treasurer, register of deeds, surveyor, superintendent of public instruction and three commissioners, all subject to change by the Legislature. Efforts to provide for coroners and to combine the county and district clerks were voted down. Early in the day short memorial services were held by the convention for Abraham Lincoln. Eulogies were delivered by delegates Murray, Williams of Durant, Caudill, Mitch, Asp, Herling, Pittman, Cobb and Williams of Stockholm. At noon the adjournment was in memory of the illustrious dead.

FIRST ELECTION WILL LIKELY OCCUR AUGUST 6

Guthrie, Okla. Feb. 13.—Immediately upon the adjournment of the constitutional convention, the president thereof shall issue a proclamation naming Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1907, as the date of the election of all state, district county and township officers of the new state and the ratification or rejection of the constitution under the report of the committee on privileges and elections which is now practically completed. Chairman Cham Jones said last night that he hoped to be able to submit the report to the convention today. The report provides for the creation of a 'Supreme Election Board' of the state of Oklahoma consisting of five members not more than three of whom shall be of the same political party. The manner of choosing the members of this board has not been definitely decided but is probable that their election will be left to the convention to be decided when the report is being considered. Any vacancy occurring in the board after its creation shall be filled by the remaining members or member of the same political faith as the one whose incumbency has for any cause ceased. Within ten days after the adoption of the ordinance by the constitutional convention, creating the supreme election board it shall meet and organize by election of its members chairman. It is made the duty of the state board to create a board of election commissioners of three members for each county in the whole state. Not more than two members of the county board shall be members of the same political party. Within 20 days after their appointment each county board shall divide its county into election precincts and designate the polling places therein. A map of each county showing the precincts and polling places must be filed with the supreme election board by the county boards. These county boards are given the same duties and powers as the election commissioners under the laws of the territory of Oklahoma. They shall make returns to the supreme election board of the state on all elections except for the ratification or rejection of all the constitution and all separate ordinances submitted with the same, which shall be returned to the secretary of the territory of Oklahoma as prescribed in the enabling act. The question of the ratification or rejection of the constitution must be submitted on a ballot separate from all other questions voted on. The supreme election board having canvassed the results of the election of United States senators will certify this result to each branch of the state legislature on the first day of its session.

FRIGHTFUL LOSS OF LIFE FROM COLLISION AT SEA

Block Island, R. I., Feb. 13.—A marine disaster with an appalling loss of life and entailing suffering almost beyond the limit of human endurance came to light yesterday when a lifeboat of the Joy Line Steamer Larchmont, bound from Providence to New York, drifted into Block Island. The Larchmont had been in collision with the three-masted schooner Harry Knowlton and sank within half an hour after the accident.

In the boat were several bodies of men who had died from the effects of long hours of exposure to a death-dealing temperature. In the boat also were eleven men whose sufferings were so intense that they seemed oblivious to the fact that relief was in their midst and that they had escaped only by virtue of their ability to withstand the rigor of zero weather in an open boat at sea. The boat brought a tale of disaster that has rarely been equaled in New England waters and it is believed that when the final count is made it will be found that not less than 150 lives were lost.

Following closely in the wake of the solitary lifeboat came bodies, lifeboats and rafts cast upon the beach by angry waves.

Owing to the condition of the survivors it was impossible to get from them an estimate of the loss of life. From 75 to 150 went to their death, and at a late hour tonight it was believed that the latter figures are nearest correct.

GREER COUNTY SUES TO PREVENT DIVISION

Guthrie, Ok., Feb. 13.—The County Commissioners of Greer County, division of which into three parts is contemplated by the Constitutional convention, yesterday applied to the Oklahoma Supreme Court for an order restraining the convention from placing such division in effect. The plaintiffs are represented by Charles M. Thacker, County Attorney of Greer County, and Charles H. Eagin, both of Mangum. The brief filed in the suit recites that the Supreme and District Courts are jurisdiction under the enabling act for redress of wrongs committed against the Constitution or laws of the United States or of the Territories affecting persons or property. The right of the convention to cut new counties out of those created by the Congressional act is denied, for the reason that in the transition from Territorial conditions to statehood the necessity for such action does not exist. It is declared that Greer County was established by Congress, which is a higher authority than the body proposing the alteration, and recognizing the changing of county lines as purely of legislative authority, no alteration was legal except by the Legislature after statehood. An additional reason is laid in the fact that Greer County is named as a county in the Fifth Congressional District by the organic act, which designation forbids any other until the next general census. The convention's proposed action deprives the Legislature or people of any voice in the convention's edict or the loss of statehood that the enabling act gave the convention only legislative power as to creating one county out of the Osage Nation, that the method proposed for submitting the division question to the people is an attempt to bring duress upon the people through fear of defeating the Constitution itself. The section of the enabling act upon which plaintiffs rest their case in establishing the convention's authority reads: "After organization shall declare on behalf of the people of the said proposed State that they adopt the Constitution of the United States, whereupon the said convention shall and is hereby authorized to form a Constitution and State government for the proposed said State." The provision proposing a division of Greer County has not passed third reading.

The News Nuisance.

That mahogany brindle pup, when he was younger and daintier, bore the honor of being The News' mascot. Now that he has grown bigger and smarter he has become The News Nuisance.

To illustrate how obnoxious he is since getting large enough to run around, he followed some school children this morning, and one may judge of the furore he created at the school building by the following note attached to the pup when returned to the News office before noon in custody of a 2nd grade boy who brought the pup and the note at the urgent request of the young lady school teacher:

"This is a very bright pupil. In an hour he has graduated from the Ada public school, having gone through the high first, the second and fourth in a very few minutes. He is too bright to stay any longer."

Crazy Negro in Jail.

Tom Bruner, a floating insane negro, was taken up by the U. S. officers Tuesday and placed in jail for safe keeping.

Since the legal procedure for the restraint of lunatics in the Territory is devious and cumbersome, the usual justifiable subterfuge was resorted to, viz., that of filing a straw complaint for assault to kill.

JUDGE FURMAN PRAISED

The Stratford Chronicle Has The Following to say About Judge Furman

In an address to the voters of Oklahoma Judge Furman has the following to say:

"The government has no right to tax one section or one class to build up and enrich other sections or other classes. If there ever was a time when our infant industries needed protection that time has long since ceased to exist. If they can compete with foreign manufacturers on foreign soil they certainly should do so on American soil.

"That they do so compete is conclusively shown by hundreds of millions worth of manufactured goods which we ship abroad each year and which are sold in foreign countries in competition with foreign manufacturers. Americans should certainly have the right to purchase American made goods at home as cheaply as foreigners can and do purchase these same goods in foreign markets."

Judge Furman's utterances in the above are utterly unanswerable by the champions of republicanism or any other jam, and could the democrats of this county get their consent to fall back on these issues that have never failed to win a victory we would never have another tyrant as we now have to threaten the rights of any state. The great monopolies of this country were fostered by a Chinese wall in the way of protective tariff and all this howl about trust and monopoly would have gone out of existence only for this Chinese tariff wall. If the democratic party will elect more Furrmans to fight their battles, men who are ready and willing to throw down socialistic ideas, such as government ownership and fight for real issues upon which this great government has been built and maintained they will know no defeat.

Everybody Pleased

Ada people had seen numerous moving picture shows before and had been measurably pleased; but not until Tuesday night did they learn the difference between excellent and ordinary moving pictures. That night in large numbers Ada people were at the opera house and enjoyed Whitney's celebrated bioscope in operation.

Such an improvement is it over the ordinary picture machine that it proved a revelation and a continuous joy. The best feature of it, there were no flickers or quivers, such as usually tire one's eyes and keep one blinking.

Then the two hours' program was chosen with consummate taste, was altogether charming. There were the thrilling scenes of "The Fire Bug," "The Train Wreckers," "The Mutiny and rioting at Odessa, the fun of a fantastic auto ride, a trip to the moon, courtship under difficulties—and a score of other good things. Each group of pictures is followed by a three minutes intermission enlivened by phonograph selections.

The attraction affords a rare opportunity both to laugh and to learn. Tonight the low prices will prevail and there will be a sweeping change of program.

A WONDERFUL CITY of MARBLE

EAGLE LAKE

The entire Pacific Northwest is talking about the discovery in Stevens county, Washington, of the most wonderful marble deposits in the world, deposits which rival those of the famed Carrara mines of Italy and make the great marble beds of Vermont a mere side show.

In this most wonderful country of a wonderful inland empire are mountains of marble rising abruptly from the banks of the Columbia river to a height of from 200 to 800 feet and extending back from the river for more than one mile—solid mountains of marble containing all of the finest varieties manufactured in any country and sold at fancy prices. In connection with these almost unlimited and unestimated marble deposits there have been discovered several of the most beautiful lakes imaginable, marble lakes with banks and bottoms which rival the beauties of many famous collections of marble statuary in the museums and in the homes of millionaires.

These lakes are huge marble basins filled with crystalline water of a purity which gives back to the surface such a perfect picture of tinted beauty as can be seen in no other place. Around one of these exquisite marble lakes—Eagle lake it is called—not more than three miles from the town of Bossburg a large marble company has perfected plans for the construction of a marble town. It is planned to make the entire town and the future city of solid marble, polished and tinted in such a manner as to make a fairylike place read of in story books and seen in the dreams of childhood.

The beauties of the lake around which the marble town is to be built are indescribable. The shores are prettily wooded and the oval marble banks slope gently down to the surface of the water. Every portion of the bottom of this wonderful lake can be clearly seen through the opalescent waters and the tinting and coloring of the marble are easily distinguished. Around this lake and around this future city it is likely that the greatest marble industry in the world will, in time, center. The only marble deposits which compare with those in Stevens county in extent are those of the Caharra mountain in Italy, from which marble has been quarried for the past 2,500 years.

It was not until 1893 that the discovery was made. Prior to that time every one supposed that the great white mountain-like formations skirting the bank of the Columbia was limestone, so white had it weathered in the ages that have passed. Not until then did any one take the trouble to ascertain that the purest and best quality of marble had been thrown up there by the hand of nature in exactly the most natural spot to quarry. Not until a comparatively recent date was it determined that the marble deposits were of such inexhaustible character. Since then marble mills have been erected in Spokane and the development of the marble quarries has been rapid. Chicago capital and Chicago enterprise are largely responsible for this. F. H. Sammis of Chicago is now in charge of the Spokane mills, which are cutting and polishing ten car loads of marble daily for the market.

The serpentine marble from these quarries is the greenest ever discovered, is of ivory-like texture and sells for $15 per cubic foot. Many of the less fine grades sell from $5 to $12 per cubic foot. It costs but 50 cents per cubic foot to quarry the marble, and it can be delivered at New York at an expense of $1.40 and at Chicago for $1 per cubic foot. From this it can be seen that it pays to own a good marble quarry. The Stevens county marble is in position to compete successfully with the Italian and with the Vermont marble in every market. There are several good reasons for this. The main reasons are the superiority of quality and the cheapness of quarrying. Most marbles are quarried beneath the surface and hoisted out. The Washington marble are quarried and then skidded down the mountain side to the cars. Other marble industries lease land and build railroads in order to get rid of their waste material. The Stevens county marble man simply dumps his waste down the mountain side, upon which there is an abundant supply of lumber.

a supply sufficient for all building purposes and for all packing and crating for at least 20 years to come.

Within 20 miles of the marble beds the enormous energy which lies in the falls of the Kettle river is being harnessed with a view to furnishing cheap electric power for quarrying purposes. The marble deposits are along the right of way of the Spokane Falls & Northern road, which is now owned and operated by the Great Northern, and James J. Hill is offering special inducements in the way of freight rates to develop this wonderful country.

In the New York market Italian Pavanazza never sells for less than $12 per cubic foot. It is a badly shattered marble. The Stevens county marble duplicates all of the Italian markings, surpasses it in beauty, presents a perfect solidity, and can be quarried and sold in New York for $6 per cubic foot with a net profit of $3.70 per cubic foot.

The beds from which this matchless marble comes rise from the sandy flats of the river, appearing in some places in long, unbroken slopes up which one may climb to a height of 500 to 700 feet above the river level, traveling on solid marble all the way. These slopes are in many places smooth and solid, the pattern of the marble showing unbroken at the surface. In other places the marble rises above the river level in great bluffs, one above another. In many places the marble is found in smooth floors at the summits and in broad slopes drooping to the river banks. At the surface it is remarkably solid, indicating that the beds lie undisturbed to a great depth. Its broad, unbroken surface of white displaying bold markings of blue and jet black. Frequently the top of the mass can be found floors an acre in expanse which are as smooth, hard and even as a rolled and leveled asphalt pavements.

A great deal of the marble at the surface is cream tinted and is crossed with jet black veins, resembling in pattern the famous Pavanazza marble of Italy, but much more solid and is free from the pit holes which damage the Italian product. It takes an extremely high polish and retains it, and its texture is dense, uniform and very fine crystalline, showing in many places marked translucency. There is one tract alone of this marble destined to rival the Pavanazza which contains 1,310 acres and which is capable of producing the finest marble for centuries to come without exhausting the supply.

This is not the only factor which has given Stevens county the reputation in the Northwest of being one of the most wonderful counties in the United States. Stevens is the northeast corner county of Washington and contains 2,945 square miles of territory and about 18,000 people. The Spokane Falls & Northern road bisects it north and south and provides it with markets. It is semi-mountainous, and in its mountains are gold and silver for the industries, lime and cement, quarries of onyx and jasper, marble, granite and slate for the builder, clays for the potter and the brickmaker, and in the foothills is timber in abundance. In the Columbia, the Pen d'Oreille and other valleys which these rich mineral mountains inclose are thousands of acres of the most fertile land imaginable, land upon which all kinds of fruits and cereals are being raised in abundance, amid scenery which is beautiful beyond description.

In speaking of the mineral deposits a recent discovery of tungsten and molybdenite must not be forgotten. There are only seventy tons of tungsten produced in this country annually, and it sells for $3,000 a ton. It is also produced in Australia, 2,500 tons annually, and in Sweden and Germany, but all of this output is absorbed by the Krupp works, where it is used in hardening steel. Large veins of this metal have been discovered in Stevens county from which can be produced more than 2,000 tons annually. Molybdenite, which sells for $850 a ton, is produced from a mine in Maine at the rate of 50 or 60 tons a year, and Colorado produces about 150 tons. The vein discovered in Stevens county is six feet wide, 30 feet deep and more than a mile long.

JIM

By B. T. Kahmann

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

We all liked Jim, not a man in the whole camp who was not his friend. The first time Jim made his appearance was on a chill September morning. I was walking to the mine when I heard a cheery whistle and, turning, beheld a tall, stalwart young fellow, dark eyes, a smiling mouth, and at once I took a fancy to him.

I smiled involuntarily and held forth my hand. He grasped it eagerly and, shaking it, turned his head as if to hide his emotion. "You are the first man to treat me like this, and you ain't never going to regret it."

I raised my eyes, looking at the firm, square jaw, and into the honest face, and answered, "I know I shall not."

From that day Jim remained. He was always Jim; no one knew him by any other name, and he offered no explanations. No one asked who he was, where he came from, what he had done, or how long he intended to stay. They all met him quietly and gladly accepted his presence, and soon every man, woman and child was his own particular friend.

Jim was no model, not by any means. He loved to stand before the Golden Gate bar, most of his earnings going to that source, but he never indulged too freely, and he was never known to be seen under the influence of liquor. He was fond of playing cards being one of his favorite amusements. He was much delighted when he won, but he always played fairly and squarely, and was never accused of cheating.

The little children in particular loved Jim. He was wont to sit with a dozen or more perched about him, one on each knee, some leaning confidently against him; all eagerly listening to some tale which he could so skillfully invent. Many a trinket found its way into their homes, and it was always Jim's deed.

One bright and sunny morning a group of men were leaning and lounging in the Golden Gate bar. Jim and I were at a table playing cards.

"The devil! I've won again!" cried Jim, slapping his knee in delight.

"I bet that is the last game you ever win," I retorted jokingly.

Scarcely had I spoken when the door was flung open and a man, panting and breathless, threw himself into the room. "The dam in the mine has given way."

"Great God!" The cards slipped from my hands as I realized the terrible meaning of his words.

"The miners will be drowned like rats in a trap; there ain't no way to get out," the man continued.

I saw Jim turn pale as he put down the cards. He seemed to study for a moment, then rose saying, "Yes, there is a way, only one way; they can't get out of the east shaft, because that is blocked by the breaking of the dam, but the wall, by breaking that the pressure of the water will be released, the water will rush through the opening, and a few hours' work will set them free."

"Do you know what it means to break that wall? Death for the one who attempts it. The water will surge out with such a tremendous force, taking everything in its way, and the man—he would scarcely have time to realize his fate."

He did not flinch; he acted as if there were no need for excitement, as if it were an every-day affair. "You spoke truly when you said that my last game of cards. It is, pal, for Jim will never hold another ace."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that that wall must be broken, and I am the man to break it, and I don't think it likely that I shall ever play after that."

"Jim, you are crazy!" The exclamation fell from 20 lips in a single chorus.

"Oh, no I ain't; but it's got to be done."

We sprang forward, grasping him by the arms, but he shook himself free.

"Let me go, boys, of what good am I anyway? I never did anything in my life. Why not let me do this? You can't go; you have all got wives and children. Think of them and of the men in the mine, struggling for life and freedom, with that awful death in store for them. If no one goes and helps, hundreds, your best friends and all, will drown in the mine, when they can be so easily saved. What is the cost of one life when it will save hundreds? Who will mourn and weep when they bring me back so cold and still? There won't be any tears, because there is no one who cares, and if those hundreds perish, how great will be the ruin and disaster. You must let me go. Look! see those mothers. Listen to the songs upon their lips and see their smiling faces. Will they ever smile or sing if their husbands do not return to-night? See the little children; who will care for them if the father comes no more? What will those women so utterly helpless and dependent, what will they do if some one is not willing to take the risk? And then look at me. Will they be sad when I am gone? No. Will they be deprived of any delight and joy when Jim is hidden? No. Oh! you may be sorry, but that will vanish and soon the sun will shine just as brightly, the birds sing just as sweetly for you as if there had been no Jim."

A lump which I could not swallow came into my throat, and the others hid their faces. He looked so young and boyish, so strong and full of life, that to think of him still in death chilled our very hearts and minds.

"I ain't so good that I like to think of dying, but it has got to be. One or a hundred. One would be much better. You have all been mighty good to me, and I want to thank you. Think kindly of me, boys, and—don't forget too soon, as I'd like to be remembered."

He slowly shook hands with us, one by one. The lips of the boys were drawn and it seemed to me that I was committing a crime. Just as he held my hand a sunny-haired girl ran up to Jim. "We wants a tory," she lisped.

He stooped and tossed her into the air. "Jim won't tell stories any more Jim's going away."

"No, Jim shan't go," she sobbed, clasping him about the neck as if to prevent. "Where is Jim going?"

"Way off, where they don't worry and where they ain't down on a man because he ain't rich and great; where everything is so nice and sweet, and where even Jim can learn to be good."

The child stared at him in amazement. "That must be heaven, Jim!"

"It is heaven, I hope, and some day you will meet me over there." He kissed her softly, placing her upon the ground, while she ran to tell the rest.

"Follow me, but don't try to help." He hastened to the door, springing upon the back of his mare and turned. His face was lighted with a smile, but it was transcribed with a new radiance. The face of the rough miner was made beautiful by the greatness and mightiness of his deed and sacrifice.

We followed, and as we waited we could hear the thud, thud, thud of his hammer and the grating of his chisel, and even the falling of stone. He began to whistle the same old tune he loved so well—an old church hymn. We stood with bowed heads and beating hearts waiting for the end.

Then came a horrible, intense, deathlike stillness, which was quickly answered by a terrific explosion and report, as if a hundred cannons had gone off. The sound was that of a rock-crusher, as the stone fell, and the pieces of coal and dirt went seething past. Then again the silence, the ebbing and swirling of black, dark waters as they poured forth, rushing out, pell mell.

We stood, hoping against hope, yet knowing all the time how utterly useless it was. Presently we caught sight of a hand and his body floated to us. The dark face was partly crushed and discolored with blood, but there was a smile upon his lips. He had saved the miners and Jim had passed to his reward in the Great Beyond.

ON A BUSINESS BASIS.

Buyers' Conscience Would Not Allow Him to Take Present.

Martin Van Camp, a wholesale poultryer of Omaha, was talking the other day about buyers.

"My salesmen," he said, "would always prefer to deal directly with the heads of firms instead of with buyers. With the heads everything always is open and aboveboard. But in the case of buyers, anything one does seems to smack of trickery and deceit."

"A certain New York buyer for a big firm ordered from a salesman of mine last week a large consignment of turkeys. The salesman, pleased with the order, took the buyer a box of 100 expensive cigars. It was an honorable enough performance, but the buyer, when the present was offered to him, got mad."

"Look out," he said, warningly. "None of that. You can't bribe me, you know."

"The salesman was vexed, but he put a good face on the matter."

"Bribe you?" he exclaimed. "Why, man, you must be crazy. Who wants to bribe you? This was a simple little present, the same as I've made frequently to your employer. But if you won't have it as a present, why, buy it from me. Give me a quarter for it."

"The buyer's suspicions vanished. He searched his pockets."

"I haven't got a quarter," he said. "I've got nothing less than this half dollar."

"And I said the salesman, hoping after all that he wouldn't have to take the buyer's money—and I haven't got a cent of change."

"But the buyer nevertheless thrust the half dollar on him."

"Keep it all," he said, "and you can bring me another box on your next trip."

Driving a Bargain.

"Tommy," said his mother, "if I give you a piece of pie will you try to be a good boy?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied Tommy, "and I'll try to be gooder if you'll give me two pieces."

At Khartoum in Winter

MODERN NILE BOATS

For those whose desires lie outside the beaten track of globe trotter and tourist, the upper reaches of the Nile offer great inducements. Leaving Cairo by train, one starts from what will one day be the northern terminus of the great "Cairo to Cairo" railway, and travels steadily southwards over the desert for two days. Then a change is made to a Nile steamer, which southward, ever southward, slowly forges its way against the current of that mighty river whose history goes back to such remote impenetrable ages of antiquity. In another two days Wady Halfa is reached, and thence a light military railway bears the weary and disheveled traveler at length to Khartoum. Over 20 years have passed since Gordon's magnificent defense of the city against the Mahdi's hordes and his tragic fate at the hands of the Derivishes, thrilled all England to its depths. For the following 14 years the town was practically an abandoned ruin, the khalfia holding his court at Omdurman, on the other side of the river. Then, with the reconquest of the Sudan by Lord Kitchener, in 1898, everything was changed, and Khartoum arose proudly from its ruins to be once more the capital of that vast desert empire whose resources are as yet hardly realized and are absolutely undeveloped. The old palace, where the great general met his death, was merely a ruined shell, haunted, as the superstitious natives averred, by his uneasy spirit, so it was decided to erect a new palace wherein the sirdar and his retinue might be fittingly housed. On the site of the former building arose the Gordon college, a really fine educational institution. Since then have risen in rapid succession a military hospital, an English church and a hotel, with lines of barracks and officers' quarters, dominating the quaint huts and low narrow bazaars which constitute the native city.

In the summer months it is said of Khartoum by those who have the misfortune to remain there that, had Dante visited it he would have added another canto to his "Inferno," only the opinion is generally expressed in language more terse than polite. The thermometer stands at 122 degrees in the shade, and the pitiless sun blazes down on the hot glaring desert, varied by periodical sandstorms, when the wind whirls down on the unhappy place with terrific violence, burying everybody and everything under a layer of choking sand. In addition, all the myriad descendants of that swarm of flies who constituted the fourth plague of Egypt lead one to fervently sympathize with the unfortunate subjects of King Pharaoh.

But with the month of October a change comes over the scene. The mercury gradually falls until it reaches 85 degrees or so, a freshness creeps into the dry bracing atmosphere, the nights become cooler and more restful, and the season is at hand. Those lady members of the English colony who have betaken themselves to Cairo, Alexandria, or even England, return, like birds to their nests, for the feminine element during the hot weather consists solely of the missionaries and a couple of enforcedly staid army medical sisters. The quaint curiosity shops in the bazaar furnish up their goods, the English church holds on Sunday a fair-sized and smartly-dressed congregation, the hotel shows signs of life, and finally, with a grand flourish of trumpets the Sirdar and Lady Wingate arrive, take up their abode in the palace, and another season has begun.

Both the Sirdar and his wife are immensely popular, and contribute not a little to the gaiety of the city by entertaining frequently and giving a succession of dinners, dances and garden parties throughout the season. Their entertainments, too, have anything but the stiff, formal air which usually characterizes official gatherings, and their dinner parties are especially popular. The guests arrive in the little donkey-carriages known as arabas, which constitute the chief mode of locomotion in Khartoum, and sit down at rose-decked tables to be waited on by dark-skinned Arabs in their picturesque attire, the repast being followed by an informal dance or by parlor games, amongst which musical chairs, in which every body joins with zest, is the Sirdar's favorite.

Amongst the community at large picnics are perhaps the most usual form of amusement, and one in which a good deal of variety can be obtained. Water-picnics are the chief favorites, a start being made early in the morning on one of the Nile steam-launches, the destination being some village or ruined temple not too far distant. The scenery is in parts exceedingly picturesque, owing its beauty to the striking coloring patches of vividly green herbage, alternating with strips of golden yellow sand, and over all the glorious azure of the cloudless sky, whilst a string of camels or a family of crocodiles basking in the sun add a finishing touch to the picture. When passing by a village, the natives eagerly flock to the banks to see the English people, to whom they will freely offer handfuls of luscious dates or bowls of frothing goat's milk, the dark faces sometimes strikingly handsome, alive with animation and interest.

Moonlight picnics, too, are extremely popular, enhanced by the joys of scampering over the desert on the back of a sturdy donkey, the almost inevitable means of locomotion, walking being practically an impossibility. The motion is swift, not unpleasant, albeit somewhat jerky, the donkey being continually stimulated to fresh efforts by the shrill cries of the Sudanese boys who run alongside. The setting forth of a donkey cavalcade for a picnic is usually attended by a little excitement, accompanied by much gesticulation and vociferation on the part of the donkey boys. A runaway has to be captured and ignominiously brought back and some obstinate asinine spirits have to be coerced, but eventually all is ready, and the procession makes its way to some rendezvous where the servants, sent on ahead, have prepared a meal in readiness for their masters' arrival. As regards home life in Khartoum, for those whose duties lie in the Sudan, there are, of course, manifold difficulties and discomforts to be surmounted; yet, for at least six months in the year life may be at least endurable, not to say pleasant. Houses are large and fairly well-built, with good-sized lofty rooms and sleeping out on the flat roofs is a habit frequently if not usually indulged in, in spite of such minor drawbacks as the possibility of the sudden descent of a swarm of locusts.

Servants are obtainable in the shape of Sudanese men, black as soles, who are usually attired in spotless white garments with colored sashes. They are absolutely honest and wonderfully economical, making excellent cooks, who will contrive to set forth quite an astonishing variety of dishes manufactured from the slightest materials. They are curiously child-like in intellect and exceedingly quarrelsome amongst themselves, getting carried away to such an extent by anger over some trifling detail that they will fling half a dozen of one's most cherished dinner-plates at one another. The crash brings the mistress upon the scene, and her anger effectually cools the choler of the servants, which is succeeded by abject penitence and promises of good behavior in the future.

FIRST ELECTION WILL LIKELY OCCUR AUGUST 6

Guthrie, Okla. Feb. 13.—Immediately upon the adjournment of the constitutional convention, the president there of shall issue a proclamation naming Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1907, as the date of the election of all state, district county and township officers of the new state and the ratification or rejection of the constitution under the report of the committee on privileges and elections which is now practically completed. Chairman Cham Jones said last night that he hoped to be able to submit the report to the convention today.

The report provides for the creation of a 'Supreme election board' of the state of Oklahoma, consisting of five members not more than three of whom shall be of the same political party. The manner of choosing the members of this board has not been definitely decided, but is probable that their election will be left to the convention to be decided when the report is being considered. Any vacancy occurring in the board after its creation shall be filled by the remaining members or member of the same political faith as the one whose incumbency has for any cause ceased. Within ten days after the adoption of the ordinance by the constitutional convention, creating the supreme election board, it shall meet and organize by election of its members chairman.

It is made the duty of the state board to create a board of election commissioners of three members for each county in the whole state.

Not more than two members of the county board shall be members of the same political party.

Within 20 days after their appointment each county board shall divide its county into election precincts and designate the polling places therein. A map of each county showing the precincts and polling places must be filed with the supreme election board by the county boards.

These county boards are given the same duties and powers as the election commissioners under the laws of the territory of Oklahoma.

They shall make returns to the supreme election board of the state on all elections accept for the ratification or rejection of all the constitution and all separate ordinances submitted with the same, which shall be returned to the secretary of the territory of Oklahoma as prescribed in the enabling act. The question of the ratification or rejection of the constitution must be submitted on a ballot separate from all other questions voted on.

The supreme election board having canvassed the results of the election of United States senators will certify this result to each branch of the state legislature on the first day of its session.

CONVENTION HAS NO POWER TO PROVIDE FOR PRIMARIES

Guthrie, Okla. Feb. 13.—Authority does not rest with the constitutional convention to provide for mandatory primary election according to an opinion rendered yesterday by the judiciary committee. Several days ago the election committee addressed questions to judiciary members indicating its desire in reporting an election system for the constitution to include mandatory primaries for the first election. The committee has replied that the Oklahoma territory laws governing primary as well as general election are extended to and put in force in the Indian territory by the enabling act. The committee also agrees that the primary laws thus extended provide for an optional primary election to be determined by the political parties, and that the convention is without authority to provide otherwise. The matter is thus transferred to the party's central committee to order primaries through convention if they desire.

The judiciary committee gives its further opinion that the convention has no power to prescribe the qualifications of the electors to vote for or against the constitution, as such is fixed by the enabling act, but may prescribe qualifications of electors who shall vote for state, district or county officers at the time of the election for the purpose of ratifying the constitution.

The convention has power to create election boards to conduct the election both for the purpose of ratifying the constitution and electing officers, it has power to create a board for canvassing the vote for state county and district elections but not to canvass returns of the ratification or rejection of the constitution, as such canvassing boards are provided for by the enabling act.

The convention yesterday adopted the report of the committee on county and township organizations by providing that the county officers shall be judge, attorney, clerk, clerks of the district courts, sheriff, treasurer, register of deeds, surveyor, superintendent of public instruction and three commissioners, all subject to change by the Legislature. Efforts to provide for coroners and to combine the county and district clerks were voted down.

Early in the day short memorial services were held by the convention for Abraham Lincoln. Eulogies were delivered by delegates Murray, Williams of Durant, Caudill, Mitch, Asp, Herling, Pittman, Cobb and Williams of Stickholm. At noon the adjournment was in memory of the illustrious dead.

FRIGHTFUL LOSS OF LIFE
FROM COLLISION AT SEA

Block Island, R. I., Feb. 13.—A marine disaster with an appalling loss of life and entailing suffering almost beyond the limit of human endurance came to light yesterday when a lifeboat of the Joy Line Steamer Larchmont, bound from Providence to New York, drifted into Block Island. The Larchmont had been in collision with the three-masted schooner Harry Knowlton and sank within half an hour after the accident.

In the boat were several bodies of men who had died from the effects of long hours of exposure to a death-dealing temperature. In the boat also were eleven men whose sufferings were so intense that they seemed oblivious to the fact that relief was in their midst and that they had escaped only by virtue of their ability to withstand the rigor of zero weather in an open boat at sea.

The boat brought a tale of disaster that has rarely been equaled in New England waters and it is believed that when the final count is made it will be found that not less than 150 lives were lost.

Following closely in the wake of the solitary lifeboat came bodies, lifeboats and rafts cast upon the beach by angry waves.

Owing to the condition of the survivors it was impossible to get from them an estimate of the loss of life. From 75 to 150 went to their death, and at a late hour tonight it was believed that the latter figures are nearest correct.

GREER COUNTY SUES TO PREVENT DIVISION

Guthrie, Ok., Feb. 13.—The County Commissioners of Greer County, division of which into three parts is contemplated by the Constitutional convention, yesterday applied to the Oklahoma Supreme Court for an order restraining the convention from placing such division in effect. The plaintiffs are represented by Charles M. Thacker, County Attorney of Greer County, and Charles H. Eagin, both of Mangum.

The brief filed in the suit recites that the Supreme and District Courts are jurisdiction under the enabling act for redress of wrongs committed against the Constitution or laws of the United States or of the Territories affecting persons or property. The right of the convention to cut new counties out of those created by the Congressional act is denied, for the reason that in the transition from Territorial conditions to statehood the necessity for such action does not exist.

It is declared that Greer County was established by Congress, which is a higher authority than the body proposing the alteration, and recognizing the changing of county lines as purely of legislative authority, no alteration was legal except by the Legislature after statehood.

An additional reason is laid in the fact that Greer County is named as a county in the Fifth Congressional District by the organic act, which designation forbids any other until the next general census. The convention's proposed action deprives the Legislature or people of any voice in the convention's edict or the loss of statehood that the enabling act gave the convention only legislative power as to creating one county out of the Osage Nation, that the method proposed for submitting the division question to the people is an attempt to bring duress upon the people through fear of defeating the Constitution itself.

The section of the enabling act upon which plaintiffs rest their case in establishing the convention's authority reads:

"After organization shall declare on behalf of the people of the said proposed State that they adopt the Constitution of the United States, whereupon the said convention shall and is hereby authorized to form a Constitution and State government for the proposed said State."

The provision proposing a division of Greer County has not passed third reading.

Neglected Colds Threatened Life.

(From the Chicago Tribune.)

"Don't trifle with a cold," is good advice for prudent men and women. It may be vital in the case of a child. Proper food, good ventilation, and dry, warm clothing are the proper safeguards against colds. If they are maintained through the changeable weather of autumn, winter and spring, the chances of a surprise from ordinary colds will be slight. But the ordinary cold will become severe if neglected, and a well established ripe cold is to the germs of diphtheria what honey is to the bee. The greatest menace to child life at this season of the year is the neglected cold. Whether it is a child or adult, the cold slight or severe, the very best treatment that can be adopted is to give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is safe and sure. The great popularity and immense sale of this preparation has been attained by its remarkable cures of this ailment. A cold never results in pneumonia when it is given. For sale by G. M. Ramsey.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

Dental Job Goes Begging.
Municipal authorities of Barmen, Prussia, have been requested to advertise for a dentist who is willing to attend an elephant, an inmate of the local zoo. He suffers from peevishness in consequence of frequent attacks of toothache, caused by overabundance of sweets. At such times he is practically unmanageable. The local dentists refuse to attempt to fill his teeth. One dentist was brave enough to try to examine an aching tooth, but the enraged elephant chased him around the inclosure and the dentist afterward sent in a bill for damages caused by the shock.

Difference in the Races.
The Frenchman of the middle class sacrifices everything in order to obtain for his children some official position or other, a mean one, perhaps, but a sure one, leading after 30 years of penury to a pension verging on destitution. This is one aspect of the decay of the French race. It is easy to understand that two races are not evenly armed for the struggle for life. If one be made up of aspirants to official positions and the other of individuals possessing initiative, daring and energy. For this reason do Latin races decline, while Anglo-Saxon races grow and multiply.—Paris Steele.

Flora of Fatal Shot Unknown.
"You know how a soldier traitor is put to death," said the colonel. "The traitor stands blindfolded and half a dozen privates shoot at him simultaneously. But perhaps you don't know that each of those privates, though he takes the most careful aim, may afterward say without fear of contradiction that the traitor's blood does not stain his hands."
"This is the reason: Two of the rifles for this ghastly shooting are always loaded with blank cartridges. Then they are shuffled and no one knows which the harmless ones are. The executioners draw and each is as like as not to draw a harmless gun. So, when they shoot they can solace themselves for their un-Christianlike work with the thought that maybe they are only shooting a blank cartridge at the poor, blindfolded wretch before them."

INDIAN SCULPTURE IS LOST.

Action of Water Destroys Relic Prized by Antiquarians.

One of three known examples in the United States, the famous Indian "sculpture" on two of the immense rocks which form the "great falls" of the Connecticut river at Hallow Falls, has been entirely obliterated, not a trace of the marking which recorded some important event in the history of the aborigines being left.

The sculpture was a favorite subject of discussion for antiquarians, and developed much controversy, as to the manner and time in which it was made. When first discovered it consisted of a group of sixteen or eighteen variously ornamented heads plainly cut into the rock. The main piece of work was shown on a flat space about fifteen feet wide and six feet high, and consisted of four heads each surmounted with a pair of rays and numerous heads without any decoration. On the other rock was one large head with at least eight rays, this head being fourteen inches in depth and ten inches across at the forehead. There may have been originally also an inscription, but if so it had become obliterated by the action of the water years ago.

The markings are supposed to have represented a victory at or near Hallow Falls by four bands and their chiefs under one principal chief.

The fact that the action of the water has removed what was discovered on the rocks a hundred years or so ago indicates to not a few that much more of the record must have disappeared previously.

EGGS COOKED WITHOUT FIRE.

Eastern Dish Served to Guests of New York Restaurant.

There is a Turkish restaurant in New York where one may eat pilaffs, sherbets and saffron colored meat stew, but the oddest dish the menu boasts is "whirled eggs."

Whirled eggs, an impressive dish, is prepared before the guest. When it is ordered a cook enters the dining room with a kind of sling in his hand—a little pot attached to the end of a leather cord.

The man opens the eggs, seasons them and shuts them up in the little pot. Then he whirls the pot at the end of its cord around his head at inconceivable speed. Round and round it runs. Its outline becomes vague. It seems to smoke a little.

Suddenly the man opens it and sets the eggs before the guest. They are beautifully scrambled and quite hot. The heat of their motion through the air is what has cooked them.

"Thus," explains the Turkish host, "the Eastern shepherds cook their eggs, whirling them in a sling like that wherewith David overcame the giant Goliath."

The Vegetarian Bed.

"What a delightful bed you gave me," said the guest. "I never slept so well in all my life. Why, it was like camping in the woods."

The vegetarian host smiled. "And did you notice the smell of the bed?" he asked.

"I should think so," said the other. "An odor like pine forests, fields of lavender, flowers and ferns."

"It was a vegetarian bed you slept on," said the host. "Not a bed of vine, horse hair, torn from the worn-out carcass of a poor dead nag, but a bed of dried mosses and ferns and hay and pungent, aromatic herbs."

"We vegetarians invented this bed a year ago, and all who try it love it. It is quite as comfortable, quite as springy and elastic, as a horse hair bed and it is much more pleasant and healthful. Its sweet, woodland odor induces sleep like morphine."

Records for Reading.

"Our reading record," said the aged librarian, "is held by a rich old lady of 73 years. She has read, our books show, over 15,000 volumes—300 volumes a year since 1854."

"Our average subscriber reads in the year's course from 75 to 100 volumes, though we have many clients who get through 200 volumes every 12 months. Those who buy their books read much less. I am informed by a bookseller that the average book buyer doesn't read more than 25 or 30 books a year. The book buyer who reads 100 books a year is a very rare bird."

A Telephonic Surprise.

"There was a patient in my office the other day when the telephone rang," remarked the doctor, "and I conversed with the party on the other end of the wire in German. When I replaced the receiver and turned to the patient he looked at me in surprise and said:

"Ain't that wonderful! I didn't know it was possible to speak in German over the telephone."

The End of It.

"Now," said Markley, "here's a $5 bill. I can lend you that—"

"O! say," exclaimed Nervey, "can't you double it?"

"Of course. See? I double it once and then once again. In that shape it goes back into my pocketbook. Good day!"

Tough Luck.

"Did you call at Roxley's house?" asked the young doctor's wife.

"Yes," replied the doctor, "and I wish he had sent for me sooner."

"Gracious, is he so seriously ill?"

"No; just the contrary. I'm afraid he'll be all right again before I get in half a dozen visits."

The News Nuisance.

That mahogany brindle pup, when he was younger and daintier; bore the honor of being The News' mascot. Now that he has grown bigger and smarter he has become The News Nuisance.

To illustrate how obnoxious he is since getting large enough to run around, he followed some school children this morning, and one may judge of the furor he created at the school building by the following note attached to the pup when returned to the News office before noon in custody of a 2nd grade boy who brought the pup and the note at the urgent request of the young lady school teacher:

"This is a very bright pupil. In an hour he has graduated from the Ada public school, having gone through the high first, the second and fourth in a very few minutes. He is too bright to stay any longer."

Crazy Negro in Jail.

Tom Bruner, a floating insane negro, was taken up by the U. S. officers Tuesday and placed in jail for safe keeping.

JUDGE FURMAN PRAISED

The Stratford Chronicle Has The Following to say About Judge Furman

In an address to the voters of Oklahoma Judge Furman has the following to say:

"The government has no right to tax one section or one class to build up and enrich other sections or other classes. If there ever was a time when our infant industries needed protection that time has long since ceased to exist. If they can compete with foreign manufacturers on foreign soil they certainly should do so on American soil."

"That they do so compete is conclusively shown by hundreds of millions worth of manufactured goods which we ship abroad each year and which are sold in foreign countries in competition with foreign manufacturers. Americans should certainly have the right to purchase American made goods at home as cheaply as foreigners can and do purchase these same goods in foreign markets."

Judge Furman's utterances in the above are utterly unanswerable by the champions of republicanism or any other ism, and could the democrats of this county get their consent to fall back on these issues that have never failed to win a victory we would never have another tyrant as we now have to threaten the rights of any state. The great monopolies of this country were fostered by a Chinese wall in the way of protective tariff and all this howl about trust and monopoly would have gone out of existence only for this Chinese tariff wall. If the democratic party will elect more Furmans to fight their battles, men who are ready and willing to throw down socialistic ideas such as government ownership and fight for real issues upon which this great government has been built and maintained they will know no defeat.

Everybody Pleased

Ada people had seen numerous moving picture shows before and had been measurably pleased; but not until Tuesday night did they learn the difference between excellent and ordinary moving pictures. That night in large numbers Ada people were at the opera house and enjoyed Whitney's celebrated bioscope in operation.

Such an improvement is it over the ordinary picture machine that it proved a revelation and a continuous joy. The best feature of it, there were no flickers or quivers, such as usually tire one's eyes and keep one blinking.

Then the two hours' program was chosen with consummate taste, was altogether charming. There were the thrilling scenes of "The Fire Bug," "The Train Wreckers," "The Mutiny and rioting at Odessa, the fun of a fantastic auto ride, a trip to the moon, courtship under difficulties—and a score of other good things. Each group of pictures is followed by a three minutes intermission enlivened by phonograph selections.

The attraction affords a rare opportunity both to laugh and to learn.

Tonight the low prices will prevail and there will be a sweeping change of program.

Small Gas at Shawnee.

Shawnee, Ok., Feb. 13.—When a well drill at the farm of T. W. Ponier, six miles west of Shawnee, reached ninety-two feet the drillers were stopped by a loud rumbling noise and an unmistakable gas odor. The noise still continues and can be heard for several hundred yards. The drills will be sent deeper as soon as strong equipment can be secured.

A WONDERFUL CITY of MARBLE

EAGLE LAKE

The entire Pacific Northwest is talking about the discovery in Stevens county, Washington, of the most wonderful marble deposits in the world, deposits which rival those of the famed Carrara mines of Italy and make the great marble beds of Vermont a mere side show.

In this most wonderful country of a wonderful inland empire are mountains of marble rising abruptly from the banks of the Columbia river to a height of from 200 to 800 feet and extending back from the river for more than one mile—solid mountains of marble containing all of the finest varieties manufactured in any country and sold at fancy prices. In connection with these almost unlimited and unestimated marble deposits there have been discovered several of the most beautiful lakes in the Northwest, marble lakes with banks and bottoms which rival the beauties of many famous collections of marble statuary in the museums and in the homes of millionaires.

These lakes are huge marble basins filled with crystalline water of a purity which gives back to the surface such a perfect picture of tinted beauty as can be seen in no other place. Around one of these exquisite marble lakes—Eagle lake it is called—not more than three miles from the town of Bossburg a large marble company has perfected plans for the construction of a marble town. It is planned to make the entire town and the future city of solid marble, polished and tinted in such a manner as to make a fairylike place read of in story books and seen in the dreams of childhood.

The beauties of the lake around which the marble town is to be built are indescribable. The shores are pretty wooded and the oval marble banks slope gently down to the surface of the water. Every portion of the bottom of this wonderful lake can be clearly seen through the opalescent waters and the tinting and coloring of the marble are easily distinguished. Around this lake and around this future city it is likely that the greatest marble industry in the world will, in time, center. The only marble deposits which compare with those in Stevens county in extent are those of the Carrara mountain in Italy, from which marble has been quarried for the past 2,500 years.

It was not until 1893 that the discovery was made. Prior to that time every one supposed that the great white mountain-like formations skirting the bank of the Columbia was limestone, so white had it weathered in the ages that have passed. Not until then did any one take the trouble to ascertain that the purest and best quality of marble had been thrown up there by the hand of nature in exactly the most natural spot to quarry. Not until a comparatively recent date was it determined that the marble deposits were of such inexhaustible character. Since then marble mills have been erected in Spokane and the development of the marble quarries has been rapid. Chicago capital and Chicago enterprise are largely responsible for this. F. H. Sammis of Chicago is now in charge of the Spokane mills, which are cutting and polishing ten car loads of marble daily for the market.

The serpentine marble from these quarries is the greenest ever discovered, is of ivory-like texture and sells for $15 per cubic foot. Many of the less fine grades sell from $6 to $12 per cubic foot. It costs but 50 cents per cubic foot to quarry the marble, and it can be delivered at New York at an expense of $1.40 and at Chicago for $1 per cubic foot. From this it can be seen that it pays to own a good marble quarry. The Stevens county marble is in position to compete successfully with the Italian and with the Vermont marble in every market. There are several good reasons for this. The main reasons are the superiority of quality and the cheapness of quarrying. Most marbles are quarried beneath the surface and hoisted out. The Washington marble are quarried and then skidded down the mountain side to the cars. Other marble industries lease land and build railroads in order to get rid of their waste material. The Stevens county marble man simply dumps his waste down the mountain side, upon which there is an abundant supply of lumber.

a supply sufficient for all building purposes and for all packing and crating for at least 20 years to come.

Within 20 miles of the marble beds the enormous energy which lies in the falls of the Kettle river is being harnessed with a view to furnishing cheap electric power for quarrying purposes. The marble deposits are along the right of way of the Spokane Falls & Northern road, which is now owned and operated by the Great Northern, and James J. Hill is offering special inducements in the way of freight rates to develop this wonderful country.

In the New York market Italian Pavenazza never sells for less than $12 per cubic foot. It is a badly shattered marble. The Stevens county marble duplicates all of the Italian markings, surpasses it in beauty, presents a perfect solidity, and can be quarried and sold in New York for $8 per cubic foot with a net profit of $3.70 per cubic foot.

The beds from which this matchless marble comes rise from the sandy flats of the river, appearing in some places in long, unbroken slopes up which one may climb to a height of 500 to 700 feet above the river level, traveling on solid marble all the way. These slopes are in many places smooth and solid, the pattern of the marble showing unbroken at the surface. In other places the marble rises above the river level in great bluffs, one above another. In many places the marble is found in smooth floors at the summits and in broad slopes drooping to the river banks. At the surface it is remarkably solid, indicating that the beds lie undisturbed to a great depth. Its broad, unbroken surface of white displaying bold markings of blue and jet black. Frequently the top of the mass can be found floors an acre in expanse which are as smooth, hard and even as a rolled and leveled asphalt pavement.

A great deal of the marble at the surface is cream tinted and is crossed with jet black veins, resembling in pattern the famous Pavenazza marble of Italy, but much more solid and is free from the pit holes which damage the Italian product. It takes an extremely high polish and retains it, and its texture is dense, uniform and very fine crystalline, showing in many places marked translucency. There is one tract alone of this marble destined to rival the Pavenazza which contains 1,310 acres and which is capable of producing the finest marble for centuries to come without exhausting the supply.

This is not the only factor which has given Stevens county the reputation in the Northwest of being one of the most wonderful counties in the United States. Stevens is the northeast corner county of Washington and contains 2,945 square miles of territory and about 18,000 people. The Spokane Falls & Northern road bisects it north and south and provides it with markets. It is semi-mountainous, and in its mountains are gold and silver for the treasure hunter, copper and lead for the industries, lime and cement, quarries of onyx and jasper, marble, granite and slate for the builder, clays for the potter and the brickmaker, and in the foothills is timber in abundance. In the Columbia, the Pen d'Oreille and other valleys which these rich mineral mountains inclose are thousands of acres of the most fertile land imaginable, land upon which all kinds of fruits and cereals are being raised in abundance, amid scenery which is beautiful beyond description.

In speaking of the mineral deposits a recent discovery of tungsten and molybdenite must not be forgotten. There are only seventy tons of tungsten produced in this country annually, and it sells for $3,000 a ton. It is also produced in Australia, 2,500 tons annually, and in Sweden and Germany, but all of this output is absorbed by the Krupp works, where it is used in hardening steel. Large veins of this metal have been discovered in Stevens county from which can be produced more than 2,000 tons annually. Molybdenite, which sells for $850 a ton, is produced from a mine in Maine at the rate of 50 or 60 tons a year, and Colorado produces about 150 tons. The vein discovered in Stevens county is six feet wide, 30 feet deep and more than a mile long.

S. GLEN ANDRUS.

JIM

By B. T. Kahmann

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

We all liked Jim, not a man in the whole camp who was not his friend. The first time Jim made his appearance was on a chill September morning. I was walking to the mine when I heard a cheery whistle and, turning, beheld a tall, stalwart young fellow, dark eyes, a smiling mouth, and at once I took a fancy to him.

I smiled involuntarily and held forth my hand. He grasped it eagerly and, shaking it, turned his head as if to hide his emotion. "You are the first man to treat me like this, and you ain't never going to regret it."

I raised my eyes, looking at the firm, square jaw, and into the honest face, and answered, "I know I shall not."

From that day Jim remained. He was always Jim; no one knew him by any other name, and he offered no explanations. No one asked who he was, where he came from, what he had done, or how long he intended to stay. They all met him quietly and gladly accepted his presence, and soon every man, woman and child was his own particular friend.

Jim was no model, not by any means. He loved to stand before the Golden Gate bar, most of his earnings going to that source, but he never indulged too freely, and he was never known to be seen under the influence of liquor. He was fond of playing cards being one of his favorite amusements. He was much delighted when he won, but he always played fairly and squarely, and was never accused of cheating.

The little children in particular loved Jim. He was wont to sit with a dozen or more perched about him, one on each knee, some leaning confidently against him, all eagerly listening to some tale which he could so skillfully invent. Many a trinket found its way into their homes, and it was always Jim's deed.

One bright and sunny morning a group of men were leaning and lounging in the Golden Gate bar. Jim and I were at a table playing cards.

"The devil! I've won again!" cried Jim, slapping his knee in delight.

"I bet that is the last game you ever win," I retorted jokingly.

Scarcely had I spoken when the door was flung open and a man, panting and breathless, threw himself into the room. "The dam in the mine has given way."

"Great God!" The cards slipped from my hands as I realized the terrible meaning of his words.

"The miners will be drowned like rats in a trap; there ain't no way to get out," the man continued.

I saw Jim turn pale as he put down the cards. He seemed to study for a moment, then rose saying, "Yes, there is a way, only one way; they can't get out of the east shaft, because that is blocked by the breaking of the dam, but the wall, by breaking that the pressure of the water will be released, the water will rush through the opening, and a few hours' work will set them free."

"Do you know what it means to break that wall? Death for the one who attempts it. The water will surge out with such a tremendous force, taking everything in its way, and the man—he would scarcely have time to realize his fate."

He did not flinch; he acted as if there were no need for excitement, as if it were an every-day affair. "You spoke truly when you said that was my last game of cards. It is, pal, for Jim will never hold another ace."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that that wall must be broken, and I am the man to break it, and I don't think it likely that I shall ever play after that."

"Jim, you are crazy!" The exclamation fell from 20 lips in a single chorus.

"Oh, no I ain't; but it's got to be done."

We sprang forward, grasping him by the arms, but he shook himself free.

"Let me go, boys, of what good am I anyway? I never did anything in my life. Why not let me do this? You can't go; you have all got wives and children. Think of them and of the men in the mine, struggling for life and freedom, with that awful death in store for them. If no one goes and helps, hundreds, your best friends and all, will drown in the mine, when they can be so easily saved. What is the cost of one life when it will save hundreds? Who will mourn and weep when they bring me back so cold and still? There won't be any tears, because there is no one who cares, and if those hundreds perish, how great will be the ruin and disaster. You must let me go. Look! see those mothers. Listen to the songs upon their lips and see their smiling faces. Will they ever smile or sing if their husbands do not return to-night? See the little children; who will care for them if the father comes no more? What will those women so utterly helpless and dependent, what will they do if some one is not willing to take the risk? And then look at me. Will they be sad when I am gone? No. Will they be deprived of any delight and joy when Jim is hidden? No. Oh! you may be sorry, but that will vanish and soon the sun will shine just as brightly, the birds sing just as sweetly for you as if there had been no Jim."

A jump which I could not swallow came into my throat, and the others hid their faces. He looked so young and boyish, so strong and full of life, that to think of him still in death chilled our very hearts and minds.

"I ain't so good that I like to think of dying, but it has got to be. One or a hundred. One would be much better. You have all been mighty good to me, and I want to thank you. Think kindly of me, boys, and—don't forget too soon, as I'd like to be remembered."

He slowly shook hands with us, one by one. The lips of the boys were drawn and it seemed to me that I was committing a crime. Just as he held my hand a sunny-haired girl ran up to Jim. "We want a tory," she lisped.

He stooped and tossed her into the air. "Jim won't tell stories any more Jim's going away."

"No, Jim shan't go," she sobbed, clasping him about the neck as if to prevent. "Where is Jim going?"

"Way off, where they don't worry and where they ain't down on a man because he ain't rich and great; where everything is so nice and sweet, and where even Jim can learn to be good."

The child stared at him in amazement. "That must be heaven, Jim!"

"It is heaven, I hope, and some day you will meet me over there." He kissed her softly, placing her upon the ground, while she ran to tell the rest.

"Follow me, but don't try to help." He hastened to the door, sprang upon the back of his mare and turned. His face was lighted with a smile, but it was transixed with a new radiance. The face of the tough miner was made beautiful by the greatness and mightiness of his deed and sacrifice.

We followed, and as we waited we could hear the thud, thud, thud of his hammer and the grating of his chisel, and even the falling of stone. He began to whistle the same old tune he loved so well—an old church hymn. We stood with bowed heads and beating hearts waiting for the end.

Then came a horrible, intense, deathlike stillness, which was quickly answered by a terrific explosion and report, as if a hundred cannons had gone off. The sound was that of a rock-crusher, as the stone fell, and the pieces of coal and dirt went seething past. Then again the silence, the ebbing and swirling of black, dark waters as they poured forth, rushing out, pell mell.

We stood, hoping against hope, yet knowing all the time how utterly useless it was. Presently we caught sight of a hand and his body floated to us. The dark face was partly crushed and discolored with blood, but there was a smile upon his lips. He had saved the miners and Jim had passed to his reward in the Great Beyond.

ON A BUSINESS BASIS.

Buyers Conscience Would Not Allow Him to Take Present.

Martin Van Camp, a wholesale purveyor of Omaha, was talking the other day about buyers.

"My salesmen," he said, "would always prefer to deal directly with the heads of firms instead of with buyers. With the heads everything always is open and aboveboard. But in the case of buyers, anything one does seems to smack of trickery and deceit."

"A certain New York buyer for a big firm ordered from a salesman of mine last week a large consignment of turkeys. The salesman, pleased with the order, took the buyer a box of 100 expensive cigars. It was an honorable enough performance, but the buyer, when the present was offered to him, got mad."

"Look out," he said, warningly. "None of that. You can't bribe me, you know."

"The salesman was vexed, but he put a good face on the matter."

"Believe you," he exclaimed. "Why, man, you must be crazy. Who wants to bribe you? This was a simple little present, the same as I've made frequently to your employer. But if you won't have it as a present, why, buy it from me. Give me a quarter for it."

"The buyer's suspicions vanished. He searched his pockets."

"I haven't got a quarter," he said. "I've got nothing less than this half dollar."

"And I," said the salesman, hoping after all that he wouldn't have to take the buyer's money—"and I haven't got a cent of change."

"But the buyer nevertheless thrust the half dollar on him."

"Keep it all," he said, "and you can bring me another box on your next trip."

Driving a Bargain.

"Tommy," said his mother, "if I give you a piece of pie will you try to be a good boy?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied Tommy, "an' I'll try to be gooder if you'll give me two pieces."

At Khartoum in Winter

MODERN NILE BOATS

For those whose desires lie outside the beaten track of globe trotter and tourist, the upper reaches of the Nile offer great inducements. Leaving Cairo by train, one starts from what will one day be the northern terminus of the great "Cape to Cairo" railway, and travels steadily southwards over the desert for two days. Then a change is made to a Nile steamer, which southward, ever southward, slowly forges its way against the current of that mighty river whose history goes back to such remote impenetrable ages of antiquity. In another two days Wady Halfa is reached, and thence a light military railway bears the weary and disheveled traveler at length to Khartoum. Over 20 years have passed since Gordon's magnificent defense of the city against the Mahdi's hordes and his tragic fate at the hands of the Derwishes, thrilled all England to its depths. For the following 14 years the town was practically an abandoned ruin, the khaila holding his court at Omdurman, on the other side of the river. Then, with the reconquest of the Soudan by Lord Kitchener, in 1898, everything was changed, and Khartoum arose proudly from its ruins to be once more the capital of that vast desert empire whose resources are as yet hardly realized and are absolutely undeveloped. The old palace, where the great general met his death, was merely a ruined shell, haunted, as the superstitious natives averred, by his uneasy spirit, so it was decided to erect a new palace wherein the sirdar and his retinue might be fittingly housed. On the site of the former building arose the Gordon college, a really fine educational institution. Since then have risen in rapid succession a military hospital, an English church and a hotel, with lines of barracks and officers' quarters, dominating the quaint huts and low narrow bazaars which constitute the native city.

In the summer months it is said of Khartoum by those who have the misfortune to remain there that, had Dante visited it he would have added another canto to his "Inferno," only the opinion is generally expressed in language more terse than polite. The thermometer stands at 122 degrees in the shade, and the pitiless sun blazes down on the hot glaring desert, varied by periodical sandstorms, when the wind whirls down on the unhappy place with terrific violence, burying everybody and everything under a layer of choking sand. In addition, all the myriad descendants of that swarm of flies who constituted the fourth plague of Egypt lead one to fervently sympathize with the unfortunate subjects of King Pharaoh.

But with the month of October a change comes over the scene. The mercury gradually falls until it reaches 85 degrees or so, a freshness creeps into the dry bracing atmosphere, the nights become cooler and more restful, and the season is at hand. Those lady members of the English colony who have betaken themselves to Cairo, Alexandria, or even England, return, like birds to their nests, for the feminine element during the hot weather consists solely of the missionaries and a couple of enforcedly stoical army medical sisters. The quaint curiosity shops in the bazaar furnish up their goods, the English church holds on Sunday a fair-sized and smartly-dressed congregation, the hotel shows signs of life, and finally, with a grand flourish of trumpets the Sirdar and Lady Wingate arrive, take up their abode in the palace, and another season has begun.

Both the Sirdar and his wife are immensely popular, and contribute not a little to the gaiety of the city by entertaining frequently and giving a succession of dinners, dances and garden parties throughout the season. Their entertainments, too, have anything but the stiff, formal air which usually characterizes official gatherings, and their dinner parties are especially popular. The guests arrive in the little donkey-carriages known as arabs, which constitute the chief mode of locomotion in Khartoum, and sit down at rose-decked tables to be waited on by dark-skinned Arabs in their picturesque attire, the repast being followed by an informal dance or by parlor games, amongst which musical chairs, in which every body joins with zest, is the Sirdar's favorite.

Amongst the community at large picnics are perhaps the most usual form of amusement, and one in which a good deal of variety can be obtained. Water-picnics are the chief favorites, a start being made early in the morning on one of the Nile steam-launches, the destination being some village or ruined temple not too far distant. The scenery is in parts exceedingly picturesque, owing its beauty to the striking coloring patches of vividly green herbage, alternating with strips of golden yellow sand, and over all the glorious azure of the cloudless sky, whilst a string of camels or a family of crocodiles basking in the sun add a finishing touch to the picture. When passing by a village, the natives eagerly flock to the banks to see the English people, to whom they will freely offer handfuls of luscious dates or bowls of frothing goat's milk, the dark faces sometimes strikingly handsome, alive with animation and interest.

Moonlight picnics, too, are extremely popular, enhanced by the joys of scampering over the desert on the back of a sturdy donkey, the almost inevitable means of locomotion, walking being practically an impossibility. The motion is swift, not unpleasant, albeit somewhat jerky, the donkey being continually stimulated to fresh efforts by the shrill cries of the Soudanese boys who run alongside. The setting forth of a donkey cavalcade for a picnic is usually attended by a little excitement, accompanied by much gesticulation and vociferation on the part of the donkey boys. A runaway has to be captured and ignominiously brought back and some obstinate asinine spirits have to be coerced, but eventually all is ready, and the procession makes its way to some rendezvous where the servants, sent on ahead, have prepared a meal in readiness for their masters' arrival.

As regards home life in Khartoum for those whose duties lie in the Soudan, there are, of course, manifold difficulties and discomforts to be surmounted; yet, for at least six months in the year life may be at least endurable, not to say pleasant. Houses are large and fairly well-built, with good-sized lofty rooms and sleeping out on the flat roofs is a habit frequently if not usually indulged in, in spite of such minor drawbacks as the possibility of the sudden descent of a swarm of locusts.

Servants are obtainable in the shape of Soudanese men, black as sloes, who are usually attired in spotless white garments with colored sashes. They are absolutely honest and wonderfully economical, making excellent cooks, who will contrive to set forth quite an astonishing variety of dishes manufactured from the slightest materials. They are curiously child-like in intellect and exceedingly quarrelsome amongst themselves, getting carried away to such an extent by anger over some trifling detail that they will fling half a dozen of one's most cherished dinner-plates at one another. The crash brings the mistress upon the scene, and her anger effectually cools the choler of the servants, which is succeeded by abject penitence and promises of good behavior in the future.

Napoleon's Name.

The name Napoleon written in Greek characters will form seven different words by dropping the final letter of each in succession.

When read, these words form a complete sentence, meaning, "Napoleon, the destroyer of whole cities, was the lion of his people."—The Sunday Magazine.
